1. The Soviet Army has built new runways on the Sanga (? Sanga) airfield, located north of Pärnu (58°23'N, 24°30'E). The runways are constructed of gravel, covered with asphalt, and are about 800 meters in length. Hangar facilities include one large and three smaller structures. There are also administration buildings, barracks, warehouses, and other buildings in the area. Air defense consists of one battery of ten single-barrel small caliber guns. One guard is stationed every fifty meters. Bombs and other supplies are stored along a branch railway line and are brought into the area by rail. [REDACTED] for additional information of the Sanga airfield.)
2. Air patrol over the Pärnu area is maintained from the airport of the town of Pärnu. Dumps containing fuel and bomb supplies are located at the airport and are visible throughout the area.
3. It is reported that the Soviet Army has built an air base on the shore of Lake Ennistu (sic, unlocated on map), Pärnu area.
